The Poetess.--An Allegory.

BY FANNY FORRESTER.

There was an immense lake nestled down in the lap of a hilly country, and fed by a thousand tributaries. Among these was a blithesome little sparkler, which oozed up through the green moss in the shadow of protecting oaks and elm trees, and trickled down from the rocks, at the foot of which it gathered up its forces, and bounded off dancing and laughing to its destination. The genius of this stream was a dear little innocent, dwelling in an amber moss cup close by, and loving most truly the rosy clouds above her, and the green earth, with its jewelled work of flowers and dews, beneath. And she was content with these—the simple-souled little Undine. But one day, a luckless day, perchance, the water maiden poised herself upon the golden rim of her sylvan temple, and gazed earnestly down upon the lake, which lay cradled in the arch of a rainbow. And she thought within herself what a nice thing it would be just to deck herself in the jewels she was daily pouring into the bosom of the lake; and canopied by that bright bow, sing to the multitudes of men who come down to drink of the burnished waters. It was but a thought, and the dear simple little Undine was on her way. At first she was intoxicated, for everything was new, glowing, gladsome; and close by her side there crept one who whispered sweet things in tones deliciously soft, but oh how replete with falsehood!

The sun made a bright path for her, and decked her robe with gold; the white blossomed wild shrub showered its tribute of purity and perfume at her feet; shadows came to kiss her dimpled mouth; the bird watted his gay wings, and then turned to fan her face, scattering pearls at every wave; and the love-eyed deer upon the stream bent its arched neck, but forgot to drink because she was there.

Oh, she was a fresh, happy spirit, singing and laughing there in the wilderness, loving the cool, deep shadows, and bearing always on her breath the scent of violets. A fresh, happy spirit was she;—what a pity that she should come out where she must barter her warm, ingenuous, beautiful faith, her simple trustfulness, and, it may be, her love and truth for the wisdom which makes the heart barren. Never was a journey more delightful than that of our bright lipped little wanderer, until she emerged from the path down the hillside; but there she began to meet with countless annoyances, and she wished herself back again nestling in her golden cradle in the wilderness—Other water-spirits were there older than herself and world-wise; and, at first, they looked disdainfully upon this simple child of the hill. But when they observed her brightness and singular purity, and knew that she would be preferred to themselves, they suddenly assumed great friendship, and attempted to unite the waters of their own brooks with hers, and crossed and re-crossed her little thread of silver, making so many provoking entanglements, that the hitherto care free spirit grew weary, and had scarcely the courage to pursue her way. Still she went on though with constantly increasing difficulty, till at last she reached the border of the lake. But, at every foot of ground she passed over, the disenchanted little spirit felt her enthusiasm ebbing. The meadow, which had looked so green and velvety in the distance, was covered with a coarse stunted glass, half faded, and the trees were diminutive and unshapely. As for the flowers,—the scentless arum grew there, and the blood-red cardinalia, and the daily water-hemlock, and, now and then, some cold blue-blossom bent its poisoned chalice for a draught, and the ominous night-shade nodded among the intertwisted roots of the cypress at a little distance. Oh, how the little spirit sighed when she thought of the fragrant dog-wood, the meek-eyed violete, and the frail, beautiful tiarella of her native wood.

There were serpents, too, by the lake side, nestled in the rank sedges, and croaking frogs, half beauty, and half deformity, and a thousand other things which made our timid little Undine look with deep regret upon the misty curl of blue which linked her mountain home with the clouds So she wandered in strange sadness about the lake, sometimes turning from the barrier raised about it when she might have passed, and sometimes jostled rudely back when she had just resolved to pass, till at last, a strong, kind hand was extended to her, she trembled for a moment above the tide, and then dropped down into the bosom of the lake. How bewildered was she there, and she shivered and tried to smile, and looked all about her to find some compensation for the dear things she had left—she had awakened little dreamer! The cold water bath had spoiled a heaven for her.

The waters of the lake did not mingle together. There lay the turbid alongside the clear and pure. the poisoned flood and the stream that had balm in it—there was every variety in the great lake, and men might come and drink of what they chose; and the spirit of the mountain rivulet grew almost happy again, when she saw bright lips bent to her own waters, and brightning still more as they quaffed.

But she must have been an angel to deem this sufficient compensation for the thousand vexatious annoyances, which no unsophisticated water-spirit, who has never followed her rich gifts to the altar of the world, can understand. And our darling little Undine was not quite an angel, and might become less angelic still, by standing too long beneath the arch of the rainbow with all her jewels on. Haste, haste thee back, pretty wanderer, before the breath of the cark hemlock has filled thy veins with poison or the sun kissed the peach-blossom from thy cheek, or the wrangling waters made thy soft voice harsh as their own, or disappointment mildewed thy heart. Haste thee back, simple Undine, and rest thy throbbing head close in the bosom of the golden moss-cup.

Pantaloons and Scandal.

The Boston papers state that one night, recently, a gentleman in Charlestown, on the opposite side of the river, left home to go to the theatre, but changed his mind and returned at nine o'clock.—Soon after he had retired to bed, his wife complained of being very ill, and begged him to get her some brandy. Alarmed, the good man hastily dressed and hurried to the shop, where he purchased the desired drink, and putting his hand in his pocket, took from it a quarter of a dollar, as he supposed—all he had in change, he was positive. The shop-keeper gave him four dollars and seventy-five cents in change. The piece was examined—it was a half-eagle. The gentleman felt again in his pockets and found over $200 there. He looked sharp at the unwhisperables—they were not his own—while those he had doffed in going to bed were among the missing.

A Guarded Answer.

In the Registration Court, Cupar Fife was called on to appear as a witness, and could not be found. On the sheriff asking where he was, a grave elderly gentleman rose up, and with much emphasis said—

"My lord, he's gone."

"Gone! gone!" said the sheriff, "where is he gone!"

"That I cannot inform you," replied the communicative gentleman, "but he's dead."

☞ A Wilmington paper states that a young lady of that city was mesmerized last week, when from some cause or other the mesmerizer was unable to restore her to her natural condition. Two physicians attended her for a great while; one of them supposed she was suffering from hysterics—she is now recovered.

The Governor's Message.

This document has the merit of brevity. Upon some points, however, it is too brief. For instance, in speaking of a Tariff of discriminating duties for protection, the Governor says—"the true policy of the nation would seem to lie between the extremes of those who claim high duties for the mere purpose of protecting particular interests, and those who would not discriminate at all; to laying revenue duties for the purpose of favoring the productions and industry of our own country." This is rather a dark sentence, but we suppose it means that the two extremes are first, those who claim high duties for the mere purpose of protection; and secondly, those who would not discriminate at all. These are the extremes, as we presume the Message intends to designate them: and the true policy of the nation, the Governor wishes to intimate, is to lay revenue duties for the purpose of favoring the productions and industry of our own country. But for a Polk man to say this, and only this, is to say almost nothing at all. For what does Governor Shunk mean by a revenue duty? Does he accord in opinion with Polk? If he does, his Protective Tariff becomes a mere nullity. And if he does not accord with him, why has he not the manhood to say so? It was worthy of the Chief Magistrate of a great State like Pennsylvania, which so mainly assisted in the election of President Polk, under the pretence of benfitting Home Industry—it was not only worthy of him, but incumbent upon him as a duty, in delivering his Message to the State Legislature, to speak out his sentiments freely and clearly upon this point, so vitally connected with all our best interests. But Governor Shunk, has not done so.

We are pleased that the Governor brings before the notice of the Legislature the claims of our country upon Congress, to expedite the removal of the obstructions in the navigation of the Ohio river, to Pittsburgh. The effort to connect the East and West by effectual and sure highways, is now more important than ever.

National Internal Improvement.

The time is come when the attention and co-operation of the General Government, are imperatively demanded, for the construction of national highways, by the improvement of the navigation of rivers, and making of railroads or other sufficient routes, for the purpose of the defence and security of our country. We are enlarging our territories, and distant States, between which the transportation or communication is difficult and uncertain, are united under one constitution; and an invasion of any part of our country, or extended territories, by a hostile power, will call forth and engage the sympathies and aid of all other portions of our great and confederated Union. Is it not unwise to look upon our position, either that which now exists or may soon arrive—the East, the West, the North, the South, and South-west, all connected constitutionally as one confederated nation, and yet without sure and sufficient routes from one to the other, although every day is filled with the debates or reports of possible or probable hostilities from abroad—is it not unwise to regard this position of our country, and to sit still, unmindful of the solemn charge incumbent upon us, as a free and rational people, to prepare in peace, for the contingencies or hazards of any kind, which future events may develope! To us it seems that applications should be poured in from all parts upon Congress, urging the necessity of an immediate attention to this indispensable duty.

It is true some small appropriations have been made by Congress, for the improvement of certain harbors and rivers; but what are these compared with the requirements of the present juncture of affairs? A few additional millions of dollars, expended by the General Government, in the construction of a more extended and certain inland transportation, beside the fact of its being required for the discharge of a national duty, may possibly save the loss hereafter, and at no distant day, of countless treasures of money and blood.

But while we urge this subject upon the immediate attention and action of Congress, we must not be unmindful that our own State, has also, an obligation upon her, at this time, which both State interest and patriotism, should recommend to her prompt and efficient legislation. Pennsylvania is emphatically and justly called the Keystone of the Federal arch: over her soil, lies the most practicable and secure passage from the East to the West: and in case of hostilities with any foreign power, a continuous thoroughfare over Pennsylvania, is called for by all the considerations of national safety, security and glory. To this point, we heretofore asked attention; and we now reiterate our expressions of the deep value to our country, as well as to our own Commonwealth, of the applications, which will be presented to the Legislature at Harrisburg, in regard to the right of way, and the construction of a continuous Pennsylvania railroad.—Upon these applications, all other feelings should be merged in the honest and warm-hearted determination and endeavor to adopt that course at once and fully, which the general good, considered under every possible view of our interests, so clearly enjoins upon us.

☞ We are indebted to the editors of the Post for a copy of the Governor's Message. So little interest has been felt in this document, we did not think it worth the trouble and expense of issuing an extra, yesterday afternoon. It has one merit, for which we highly commend his Excellency—it is short. Gov. Shunk seems to have been admonished by the universal grumbling at President Polk's tedious "important state paper."

☞ The Postmaster General has issued an order to the city Postmaster of Washington to the effect that all letters or documents franked by members of Congress, shall be charged with letter postage, unless it shall appear that said letters or packages emanated directly from members themselves. The effect of this is, that all letters on which there is a difference between the hand-writing of the frank and that of the remainder of the superscription, will be presumed not to have emanated from members franking, and will be charged accordingly. If, however, on the arrival of the letter at its destination, the receiver shall think proper to open it, and show that it is a bona fide communication from a member, then the postage shall be refunded.

☞ The mysteries of New York increase. In the papers of Monday, it is announced that "the arm of a female was picked up in the street;"—"a dead, new born infant was found in a box in Eleventh street"—that "Mr. W. H. Jennison left his residence on Saturday afternoon, to go to the lower part of the city on business, since which no tidings have been received of him, and apprehensions for his safety are entertained"—that a white man came to the police office with his face "blacked," and complaining that he had been painted and robbed whilst "overcome" with the spirit—and divers other minor offences. Mr. Jennison, however, returned home in the afternoon.

Hon. Louis McLane, according to the Baltimore correspondent of the Boston Atlas, has written home that he "expects to be able to return in March next;" and that he should then resume, if it should so please the Directors, the Presidency of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company. So little idea had he that war was coming, that he wrote by the last steamer, that there would be no difficulty in negotiating a loan in London for the money necessary to complete the Railroad to the Ohio, if the right of way be granted by Virginia. This agrees substantially with the information we received and published some time ago, but which was imperatively denied from certain quarters.

☞ We understand that Mr. J. Brown, formerly Pastor of a Congregational church, in the reserve, will be set apart to the Pastoral office, next Sabbath morning, (to-morrow) Jan. 11th, in the First Congregational meeting house, St. Clair street, near the Bridge, as Co-Pastor with Mr. John Tassey, for a long time past Pastor of the said Church.—Service at 10½ o'clock. jan10-1t

Consular System of the United States.

Under this head the New Orleans Commercial Times contains an article calling attention to a subject of great importance.

The present Consular system of our country, it cannot be denied, is as defective as the Times states; and a mode for remedying it should be at once devised: for, certainly, an effective reform of it, cannot be difficult.

The Times acknowledges the obligations of our country to Mr. C. E. Lester, late U. S. Consul at Genoa, for an able exposition of the present consular system. The treatise of Mr. Lester, exhibits the features of the present system, with many interesting and instructive observations suggested by his experience and an earnest desire to throw light on this subject; and according to the Times, "the result has been, he clearly shows, that while the United States is the worst represented country in the world, he also shows that the consular system, as now organized, is of little or no benefit whatever; in fact, rather an injury. We should judge it might be broken up, and no one suffer."

We shall condense from the above authority, the evils complained of by Mr. Lester; and our readers will immediately see the propriety of this gentleman's views:

1st. Under the present system, the United States Consul is generally a merchant, engaged in active business on his own account. Hence, he looks to his own commercial interest. An instance of abuse from the consular interest, is given in the case of an American vessel, arriving at a port in the Mediterranean, with a valuable cargo, consigned to any house the captain might select. The captain called on the American Consul, who, instead of giving such information as was then in his power, and which would have been highly beneficial to the owners of the cargo, withheld it, and the consequence was the Consul bimself became the purchaser of the goods, and realized a large profit.

2d. Foreigners are appointed United States Consuls. An instance of abuse is here also given. An English Consul of the United States, neglected to give important information to the American Mediterranean fleet, upon difficulties which were anticipated between the United States and Great Britain on the Oregon question. The English American Consul justified himself by saying "it could not be expected of him to do anything that would injure his own country, England."

3d. The United States Government does not furnish its Consuls with sufficient instructions, nor with copies of treaties of commerce, and books setting forth needful information. These the Consul does not, and cannot, always, himself obtain; and "so he flounders through the duties of his office, probably at first ignorant what to do, and finally indifferent what he does."

"Instances are given, of American citizens being grossly abused abroad, and yet no redress demanded. On this subject, a volume might be written; many cases could be recorded, where our flag, and our people, have been treated with disrespect; and yet the Government at Washington has taken no notice of it. Mr. Lester asks for immediate attention to this subject, and gives a very excellent outline of the improvements demanded. He says that the consular system should be entirely re-organized in all its distinguishing features. Consuls should be paid regular salaries, adequate to their support, and an appropriation should be made for an outfit for the pay of Vice-Consuls, and Secretaries, and Clerks; and this sum should be sufficient to maintain the Consul in a manner corresponding with the rank of his country and the dignity of his station.

They should be clothed with all necessary authority for a firm and efficient execution of justice in all cases that may arise in foreign countries, affecting the interest or reputation of our citizens or government.

Every Consul should be provided with a library of all the standard works on law, commerce, and diplomacy.

His powers, his rights, and responsibilities, should be adequate and defined.

He should be prohibited frem engaging in any mercantile pursuit.

Consular fees should be few, well defined, and go to the government.

There should be grades of consular rank established. In the chief port or capital of every foreign country, there should be a Consul-General, with a limited control over the Consuls and Vice-Consuls in the other ports."

We agree with Mr. Lester, that this subject of the consular system, is of the very utmost importance to the security and welfare of our Commerce and of our Foreign Relations; and we cannot refrain from the expression of our cordial thanks to him, for his indefatigable zeal in bringing forward these interesting points, with so much ability and clearness of view before the public mind.

The Legislature.

In the Senate the election for a Speaker resulted as follows:

Sherwood, of Tioga,	16
Gibbins, of Phila., city,	13
Stergiere, of Montgomery,	1
Sullivan, of Butler,	1

In the House, Findley Patterson, of Armstrong, was elected Speaker on the first ballot, by the following vote:

Findley Patterson, of Armstrong, (Dem.)	65
Thomas Nicholson, of Beaver, (Whig,)	33

Foreign News.

We learn from the Baltimore Sun, that the next arrival from Europe is looked for with much anxiety. The steamer Hibernia was to leave Liverpool on Sunday at noon, and will therefore be due in a fortnight. Meanwhile there are some eight or ten sailing packets which were to leave either Liverpool, London or Havre at dates ranging from Dec. 6th to Dec. 24th, either of which may, and some of which probably will, arrive before the Hibernia. None of these, however, will be likely to bring any intelligence of the effect produced in England by the president's Message, which is the topic of most pressing interest and importance.

Malicious.

On Thursday a report was started by some interested persons in this city, that the steamer Allegheny had sunk, near Stubenville, on her downward trip, and that several lives were lost. Those who had friends on the boat, were much alarmed; but became easy after making enquiries, and finding no foundation in the story.

We have heard it intimated that the rumor was started, to have effect in a trial before Judge Patton; but what amount of truth there may be in this we cannot say.

Hancock County.

The Quincy Whig states, that there was nothing of any interest stirring in the county—a general quiet seems to reign, under the impression that the Saints at Nauvoo will leave the State in the spring. Backenstos has returned to the county, full as popular with the people as before he left.

Allegheny Hall.

The members of the Allegheny boast, and well they may, of having the best Engine House in the city. The hall on the second story will look splendid, as it is the object of the company to have it as soon as possible.

Mayor's Office.—Two cases before his honor on Friday morning, for the small crime of getting corned. They were both disposed of by being sent to the hill for twenty-four hours.

☞ The publication of the daily "Sunbeam" has been suspended. Its publication will be resumed as soon as circumstances will permit.

Progress of Temperance.

The Zanesville Courier states that in the circuit composed of Clinton, Clermont, &c., and also in the Scioto circuit, the Courts have refused to grant any liquor tavern licenses. At the last Common Pleas in Muskingum county every application whre a remonstrance had been put in, was laid over until the next term.

☞ Forty-six pieces of ordnance, for the Baton Rouge garrison, arrived at that place from Pittsburgh, last Sunday.—N O. Picayune, 27th ult.

Attempt to commit Murder.—In the Fifth Ward of this city, on Wednesday night, a man named Regan attempted to take the life of his wife, by stabbing her in the back of her neck. Two women passing the door at the moment, heard the noise, and immediately gave the alarm. Several persons rushed into the house, in time, as they thought, to have secured the wretch, but he made his escape.

The wound was dressed by Dr. Hazlet, who, we learn, says it was made with some sharp instrument, and that it would certainly have been fatal, had it not been that the point of the weapon used glanced off of the scull bone.—Post of Friday.

Governor's Message.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

Gentlemen:—The general health of the people, the rich rewards of husbandry, the quickening spirit that pervades trade and industry, the enlarged prosperity of our country, and its advance in moral and intellectual attainments,—these, under a just sense of our dependence, swell our grateful acknowledgements, at this time to Him from whose benificence they all proceed. Nothing has occurred since the adjournment of the Legislature to interrupt the harmony or check the energies of our Commonwealth. On the contrary, intelligent enterprise has been every where crowned with success.

The exertions of our people to meet the engagements of the State, have thus far been successful. The payment, by a number of counties of the whole amount of their taxes for 1846, several months before the time at which they have heretofore been collectad, added more than $300,000 to the effective revenues of the year; and the last Legislature having excluded certain classes of debts from the claims to be immediately provided for by the Treasury, we have been enabled to pay the interest which fell due on the funded debt within the past fiscal year. On the first day of the present Session, the balance remaining in the Treasury was about $625,000, which, with the accruing revenues, will be applicable to the demands of the first of next month. We have thus the reasonable and gratifying assurance, that the interest will then also be punctually paid.

The Public debt of Pennsylvania, on the 1st of December 1845, as appears from the report of the Auditor General, was as follows:—

Funded debt,	$36,729,267 43
Relief Notes in circulation,	1,258,572 00
Interest Certificates outstanding with interest thereon,	2,888,803 36
Due to Domestic Creditors,	99,750 43
	$40,986,393 22
The interest upon which, according to the Auditor General's computation for 1846, is	$2,023,996 09
The balance in the Treasury on the 1st December, 1844, was	663,851 88
The receipts into the same, during the year ending on the 30th November last, as appears in detail by the reports of Auditor General and State Treasurer, were	3,010,062 34
Making an aggregate sum of	$3,673,914 22
The payments from the Treasury, during the same period, were, according to the reports of the same officers,	3,289,028 13
which being deducted from the above, shows the balance in the Treasury, on the 1st Dec., 1845,	$384,886 09
being less by $278,965 79, than it was on the 1st December, 1844.
The nett amount of available outstanding taxes on real and personal estate, after making allowances for collections and exonerations, on the 1st December, 1844, was estimated by the late State Treasurer at $887,301 71.
It appears, however, from a subsequent estimate, founded upon more full returns and a more accurate knowledge of the extent of exonerations, that the amount actually outstanding on that day, was	$1,009,778 03
The nett and available amount outstanding on the 1st December, 1845, is estimated at	874,544 50
The amount of outstanding taxes on the 1st December, 1845, is, therefore, less than it was on the 1st December, 1844, by the sum of	135,233 55
Adding to this sum the difference between the balance in the Treasury on the 1st December, 1844, and the 1st December, 1845,	$218,965 70
We have an aggregate reduction of the balance in the Treasury and of outstanding taxes on the 1st day of December, 1845, as compared with the same items on the 1st December, 1844, of	$414,199 32

From the statement it is apparent, that the receipts into the Treasury, during the year, derived from taxation on real and personal estate, and other sources of revenue properly belonged to the year, were less than the demands upon the Treasury for the same period, by the amount above stated. And it is also apparent, that if the Legislature had not postponed the payment of the domestic creditors, and the interest on the certificates issued for interest, and if the cancellation of a portion of the relief notes required under existing laws to be cancelled, had not been deferred, the whole balance in the Treasury would have been exhausted on the 1st of December last.

For the purpose of convenient reference, I have appended to this communication, a summary statement (marked A.) of the receipts and expenditures of the past year, with an estimate, prepared with much care and deliberation, for the current year, ending on the 30th November, 1846.

According to this, the receips of the year from all sources, including $1,300,000, from texas on real and personal estate, will be	$3,217,700 00
Which added to the balance in the Treasury on the 1st December, 1845,	384,886, 09
Makes an aggregate of	$3,602,586 09
Deducting from which, the estimated payments during the same period,	$3,513,996 09
We arrive at an estimate balance in the Treasury on the 1st day of Dec., 1846, of	88,590 00
Which is less by $296,296 09, than it was on the 1st of December 1845.
The amount of outstanding taxes on real and personal estate, considered available, on the first of Dec., 1845, was	$874,544 50
To this is to be added the assessment for 1846, which, according to the best estimates will yield a nett revenue, after deducting allowances for expenses of collections and exonerations, of	$1,180,000 00
Making an aggregate of	2,054,514 50
If from this aggregate, we deduct the estimated collections from these sources, during the year 1846,	$1,180,000 00
The Difference will be the estimated amount of texas, which on the 1st of December 1846, will remain outstanding being 120,000 00 less than was outstanding on the 1st day of December 1845.	$754,544 50
When to the reductions, thus to take place, in the outstanding taxes within the current year,	$120,000 00
We add the difference between the balance in the Treasury, on the 1st day of December 1845, and the estimated balance in the Treasury on the 1st Dec., 1846,	$296,296 09
We arrive at an aggregate reduction of these two items, within the fiscal year, ending 30th Nov., 1846, of	$416,296 09

From this view of the subject, it is apparent that the assessment of the year 1846, on real and personal estates, and the revenue of the year proper, derivable from all other sources, taken together, will be insufficient to meet the demands upon the Treasury during the same period, by the sum of $416,296 09; and that on supplying the deficiency, the balance in the Treasury, on the 1st of December, 1846, will have been reduced to $88,590,00, and the arrears of outstanding taxes, to the sum of $754,544 50. It is plain, therefore, that our present financial system is inadequate to supply the means of meeting all the demands on the Treasury, except when aided from the balance which had accumulated before the payment of interest was resumed, and by collections from the arrearages of taxes of former years—both of which will soon be exhausted.

I am constrained to add, that all these calculations and estimates, pre-suppose that the demands on the Treasury will not be permitted to transcend their ordinary limits, and that no appropriations will be made by Legislature to new objects.—These are not anticipated, because in the present state of the finances, every new appropriation may well be regarded, not as a grant of money unincumbered in the Treasury, but rather as an abstraction of funds, specifically appropriated already, and rightfully belonging to the public creditors.

The deficit in our means, under existing laws, presents for the deliberations of the General Assembly, a topic of paramount importance. It may be remembered, that in the month of January last, I expressed the opinian in an Executive message, that our finances had not reached a condition to enable us permanently, and at once, to resume payment of the full interest on our public debt. I regret that subsequent examinations and reflection, have not permitted me to believe that I was then in error. But the Legislative action on the question has changed the entire aspect of our duties, and rendered it useless to revert to former views of policy. The payment of interest on the funded debt of the Commonwealth, was, in fact, resumed on the first of February, 1845. By that act, the State asserted her present ability to meet her engagements; and it must be our care that the pledge thus renewed, be not again violated. The credit, fidelity and honor of Pennsylvania, all demand, that, henceforward, the interest on her public debt shall be punctually and fully paid.

Heretofore, we might have pleaded the unexpected failure of the depositary Bank of the State, a few days before the interest was payable, and when the monies appropriated to its discharge were accumulated in her vaults—the sudden destruction in value of nearly the entire currency in general use—the prostration of individual credit, and the deep and universal pecuniary embarrassment of the people. But now all are prospering—the currency is restored to a good degree of soundness—our revenue system, though still imperfect, has greatly increased in effectiveness and certainty—enterprise is renewed, and the people happy in their institutions, and confident in themselves, look to the appropriate action of the Legislature to make provision to satisfy the public wants.

The present period is, in truth, the crisis of our affairs. Prompt and effective measures now, to make a moderate addition to our revenue, will restore to Pennsylvania, for the future time, that proud position from which she has been temporarily been made to stoop, by a course of policy that never met the approval of her people. But the addition may be made at once. Unless the estimates that have been presented, shall prove essentially erroneous, the balance in the Treasury, on the first of December, 1846, will not exceed one hundred thousand dollars. It is, therefore, obvious, if the receipts of the Treasury, during the month of December 1846, and January 1847, do not greatly exceed the receipts of the corresponding months of any preceding year, when the amount of outstanding taxes was greater than it will be then, a deficit must occur in the means of the Treasury, to pay the interest, which will become due on the 1st of February, 1847. The necessity of the adoption of immediate and efficient measures, to guard against a result which would be so fatal to the renewed faith and honor of the State, cannot be too strongly enforced upon the attention of the Legislature.

Intimately connected with the subject of our finances, is that of the banking system of the State. The evils that have resulted from the manner in which it has been administered, and some of those more essentially connected with its organization and tendencies, have been felt by all. Yet, it may well be doubted, whether the whole of the mischiefs which it has instigated, have been traced back to their fruitful and pernicious cause. Not only has it stimulated individuals to ruin, but States have been led by its seductive and corrupting influences, into a course of wild extravagance, and consequent bankruptcy. Public debts have been contracted, even the interests of which could scarcely be met, by the most onerous taxation; while, in other cases, the faith of the Government, which ought always to be held sacred, has been violated in time of profound peace.

The history of Pennsylvania, since the beginning of the year 1836, is a painful illustration of this truth. In December, 1835, when Gov. Wolf retired from office, two months before the incorporation of the Bank of the United States, the debt of Pennsylvania was $24,539,743 32. It is now, exclusive of the amount received as a deposite from the General Government, $40,936,393 22, making an increase of the State debt in ten years, $16,396,631 90, notwithstanding the receipt in the mean time, of $2,367,514 73 of surplus revenue from the United States, and of $3,446,780 21 as premiums for bank charters. In contemplating this startling fact, we naturally look round for the meritorius objects of state policy, for this vast aggregate of twenty-two and three-quarter millions of dollars, has been expended, we find none of any magnitude. The main line of Canal and Railway, between Philadelphia and Pittsburg, had been completed, and was in successful operation. The Deleware division, the Susquehanna and North Branch division, to the mouth of the Lackawana, the West Branch to Queens Run, the Beaver division to New Castle, the Franklin line, and the French Creek Feeder, were all substantially finished when Gov. Wolf left the Executive chair; and the sum of $344,619 09, was all that remained to be paid for completing them.

The State had reached a point, in her improvement system, at which she could have suspended operations without loss. The scheme of direct taxation, to pay the interest on the State loans, which had been introduced under Governor Wolf's Administration, was admonishing the people of the inconvenience of a public debt. Every thing indicated that the further progress from State improvements was to be deferred, till time had tested the productiveness of the finished works, and the increasing developement of our resources had invited and justified their further extension. It was, at this time, that the act of 18th February 1836, was passed, entitled, "an act to repeal the State tax on real and personal property, and to continue and extend the improvements of the State by railroads and canals, and to charter a State Bank, to be called the "United States Bank." The first section of this act rescinded the system of taxes, which had been devised for the protection of the public credit—which, by other sections, more than two millions of dollars to be received from the Bank, were appropriated at once to the prosecution of company works, and the commencement of new ones, under the direct charge of the State. To enable the Commonwealth to consummate this wild extension of improvements, six millions of dollars were promised as a permanent loan to the State, at an interest of four per cent, and other loans at the same rate were to be made, when required, to the amount of one million of dollars annually.

Under the impulse of this act, and of the influences which effected its passage, a new series of improvements were begun at once, all of which, after the expenditure of many millions, now forming part of the public debt and the cause of increased taxation have been abandoned by the State, and have passed most of them, into the hands of companies, which have paid no consideration for them.

It even seems that the State has not limited its gratuities to the works thus commenced. The Beaver division, embracing forty three miles of canal in actual use, and the French Creek Feeder, costing together $1,222,927 31 and all of them finished in 1835, have been given away to companies, and leave the State with a less extended system of improvements now, than it had when the Bank of the United States was chartered.

The progress of these works was marked by the declining credit of the State, until, after the most desperate resorts—the sale of a further suspension to the Banks in 1840, and a loan in 1841 by the State to herself, by the device of issuing relief notes—the proclaimed bankruptcy of the Commonwealth forcibly arrested them.

But the evil did not stop here, when the works were abandoned the State was largely indebted to the contractors, whose claims were regarded as of primary obligation. To satisfy them, a law was passed, requiring the sale of the Bank stock, and other stocks which were owned by the State.—These stocks, which had cost the Treasury nearly $4,200,000, were, at a most unpropitious moment, sacrificed for a fraction more than $1,405,000.

However painful these recollections of pecuniary loss may be, there were attendant circumstances of graver and more momentous concern to the patriot. A new element of power found its way into our elections. The elective franchise was violated and abused—the declaratians of the public will were disregarded and defied—and the very existence of our free institutions was menaced with revolution and destruction. I allude to the memorable crisis of 1838, when a direct attempt was made, by the leaders of a minority, to usrup the government, and to substitute their dictation for the voice of the majority of the people. These scenes had their origin beyond doubt, in a sprit of reckless confidence in the power and corrupting influence of money to control the State.

Apart from these political considerations, the influence of a vitiated paper system upon the general and ordinary interests of life, is baneful and pernicious. Hitherto, there has virtually been nothing in the organization of Banks, to limit the extent and define the character of their action, but the discretion of the directors. A few individuals, constituting the efficient portion of the Boards of management, are, in fact, the depositories of this discretion; and as a general rule, subject no doubt to many honorable exceptions, it is exercised with primary, if not exclusive reference to the supposed interests of the Bank.

While the business of the country prospers, and the spirit of speculating enterprise is stimulated by success, they extend their accommodations liberally, and fill the channels of circulation with a redundant and depraved currency. An unnatural rise of prices is the consequence. Importations increase in defiance of any discriminating tariff—extravigance invades all the departments of society—indefinite credit invites to a thriftless extension of indebtedness, till, at last, the laws of trade, unchanging as those of nature, produce re-action, and the whole artificial machinery is crushed.—The people of the country are indebted to the cities; the cities are indebted abroad, where the promises of the banks are not accepted as money; and the banks are called upon to redeem their notes in coin. This they can only do by drawing in their means, refusing new accommodations, and pressing their debtors for payment. The circulation of the country is suddenly contracted; property is sacrificed, in many instances, without relieving the debtor; and his energies are paralized by hopeless insolvency.

Such, within the recent memory of all of us, has been the action of a vitiated banking system, on the faith of the State, the stability of her institutions, and the free energies of her people. It has taught us a grevous lesson of suffering; but it will not have been altogether unproductive of good, if it has impressed on us the solemn and imperative duty of guarding against the recurrence of similar evils.

The abuse of the banking system are found in many forms; but they are essentially the same in their origin and result; excessive issues of paper, and its consequent depreciation.

To give the power of manufacturing money yet effectually to limit its exercise by legislation, is practically impossible. It is obvious, that no enactment can absolutely prevent the unlawful issue of paper by a bank, which has the lawful right to issue any. Returnes of bank officers, however, exactly prescribed, or honestly made, give no security for the periods that elaps between them; and inspections of the affairs of the banks by commissioners, which have been resorted to in other States, are apt to induce a dangerous reliance on the vigilance of such officers.

It may be, that the principle of individual liability for corporate engagements, which has recently been inserted in some of our charts, may, when properly extended and made more directly operative, secure not only the crediter from loss, but the currency from dangerous fluctuations. The expertment should be fairly made in the case of every bank, that may ask a renewal of its charter. That its progress may be the better tested, I respectfully recommend that the banks be required to make monthly returns of their condition to auditors General; and that tuese be so arranged, as to present a more complete and exact view of their transactions than is furnished under the existing law. This will facilitate the future inquiries of the Legislature; and the periodical publication of the returns will secure to such of the banks, as are legitimately administered, the reward of their faithfulness, in the increased confidence of the public. I need scarcely add, that the claims of the banks to general confidence should be thoroughly investigated and fully ascertained before their charters are extended.

These recommendations have special reference to applications from existing banks. In my judgment the capital now invested in these institutions, is amply adequate to the business wants of the community. The times do not indicate the present necessity of any additional stimulus to the enterprise, and I cannot allow myself to hazard, by any act of mine, a possible renewal of the excesses which we have witnessed so recently.

Pennsylvania combines in an eminent degree the three great elements of individual and national wealth, Agriculture, Commerce and Manufactures; and the pursuits and industry of her people are profitably divided among them. Her hills and mountains are almost every where filled with inexhaustible supplies of Iron ore, and mineral coal; and her vallies abound with water power for propelling machinery, in the midst of the finest agricultural regions. She has constructed at great cost, a line of improvements by Canal and Railways, connecting the waters of the Atlantic with those of the great West; which not only affords our own citizens a cheap and convenient mode of transportating their products to markets, but also benefits the internal trade and commerce of a large number of the other States of the Union. The North and West Branch Canals, and the Delaware Division, in connexion with various improvements owned by companies, besides opening markets to the productions of the farmer, furnish outlets for our coal and other minerals, by which not only our own citizens are supplied, but also those of the neighboring and Eastern States, to the great advantage of both. Many parts of the state are also found favorably adapted to the growing of Wool, another great staple of National independence; and the successful application of mineral coal, to the smelting of iron, has given a new impetus, among us, in the most important of all branches of manufactures.

It is not surprising, therefore, that our people feel a deep anxiety in regard to the adoption of the ch nge of any policy, on the part supposed to affect such great interest. The regulation of a Tariff on imports, so as to favor the development of our domestic resources, and give satisfaction to the various parts of the Union, has long been a vexed and exciting question. Its influences for good or evil, have no doubt been greatly exaggerated in different sections of the country. The true policy of the Nation would seem to be between the extremes of those, who claim high duties for the mere purpose of protecting particular interests, and those who would not discriminate at all; to laying revenue duties for the purpose of favoring the productions and industry of our own country.

Any course of policy which would have the effect to check the intelligent and honest enterprize of our citizens, and to retard the development of our national resources, can never receive the sanction or acquiescence of the people of this confederacy. It is readily conceded, that no more moneys ought to be collected from imports, than are necessary to meet the constitutional requirement of the government economically administered.

But, on the other hand, it is maintained with entire confidence, that in laying duties for this purpose, such discriminations for protection as well as revenue, ought to be made, as will favor our own productions and industry, particularly in reference to articles which are of primary national importance and indispensable in time of war.

This policy was expressly avowed in the first revenue law for leveying duties upon imports, passed after the adoption of the federal constitution, and has been recognized and adhered to by the federal government, and sanctioned by the people of the states, from that day to the present: unless indeed the Compromise act of 1833, be considered an exception and it will be adhered to, so long as we have a due regard to our individual and national prosperity and independence.

A tariff of discriminating duties, based on the principles indicated, and so adjusted as to secure permanence in its provisions—sustained in its productive effects by the operation of a Constitutional Treasury in regulating the issues of our banks and checking excessive importations of merchandise, will, it is believed, give more stability to the general interests and business of the country, than any other system of policy within the control of the federal government.

I refer to the reports of the Board of Canal-Commissioners for a detail of the proceedings during the past year on the Public Improvements of the State. This document contains among other things, a statement, exhibiting the amount of tonnage that passed over these works during the year: which when compared with that of past years, will show their increasing value. It does not, however, exhibit near the whole amount of internal trade, as a very small proportion of the products of agriculture and manufactures find their way to markets through other channels of communication, and by far the greatest amount of our coal is transported upon Company improvements.

By the statement referred to, it appears that 86,231 tons of iron in its various forms passed over the Canals and Railways of the State during the season. How much found its way to market, upon our rivers and company works, I have no means of ascertaing with accuracy; but most probably an amount equal to that which was carried on the State improvements.

From the best information I have been enabled to obtain, not less than two millions of tons of Anthricite Coal were taken out of the mines, and carried to the markets during the last year, the greater portion of which, was sent to the Eastern and neighboring States, being an increase of about twenty-five per cent over the operations of the preceding year, and it is believed that the trade in this article will increase in even a greater ratio, the present year. Of the bituminous coal, a very large amount was also mined and sent to market. It is estimated that not less than thirteen million bushels were consumed at Pittsburgh and its vicinity, and about six millions of bushels were transported from that point down the Ohio river.

I advert with great satisfaction, to the growing confidence of the people in the success and management of our State Improvements, which has been secured by the vigilance and economy of the Canal Commissioners.

The importance of these works, as a contribution to the National defence, and their value to the citizens of other States, as well as our own, cannot be too highly appreciated. They are now yielding a considerable portion of the revenue to meet the claims upon the Treasury. The security of the public creditors, and the faith and honor of the State, are most intimately connected with their success and productiveness. They, therefore, demand the special care and vigilance of the Legislature by which the income they are now yielding, may be secured and advanced with the increasing business of the country.

In this connection, there are few objects of national concern in which Pennsylvania has a deeper interest than in the appropriation for removing the obstructions to the navigation of the Ohio River, to the city of Pittsburgh, which is a port of commercial entry. The claims upon Congress, to expediate the completion of this work, long since commenced, as one of national interest, derive great force from the communication it would facilitate between the Western and South Western States, on the one hand, and those of the Atlantic on the other, by means of our public improvements.

The legislative enactments of the last few years, have introduced numerous improvements, in the system of levying and collecting the revenues of the State, and once guarded their expenditure with more care than formerly. I have every reason to believe, that these laws are strictly and honestly administered by the Accountant and Treasury Departments, and that the influence of their authority and example, has had a salutary effect upon all the public agents. Much, however, remains to be done, to perfect our system of taxation. Complaints are made, that several of the taxes now levied are rendered unproductive, as well as oppressive, by imperfections in their assessments.—Personal estates that should bear a share of the public burthens, escape altogether, by the interposition of a trust, between the ostensible and the rightful owners. The property of many corporations, is exempted from taxation by special laws, while that of others of the same classes, and equally meritorious remains bound. Securities for the payments of money, are by the words of the law, made taxable, which are, in fact the mere evidence of passing transactions, and can in no degree, be regarded as temporary investments of the property of those in whose hands they are found. The simple exhibit, by the citizen, of his personal estate, made without any other sanction, is substituted, generally, for a less equivocal mode of ascertaing its amount and character.

It should not be forgoten, that the tax which one citizen eludes, or is legally relieved from, is distributed among the rest, and forms an addition to their burthen. The whole subject, however, is one peculiarly within your province, and I commend it to your prompt and serious consideration.

The report of the Adjutant General exhibits the condition of the Militia and Volunteers, and of the Arsenals and military property of the Commonwealth. It contains, also, judicious suggestions, in regard to the care of the public property, and the improvement of the Militia system.

As the nations of the world have not united in providing by paramount law, for the peaceful adjustment of disputes between seperate sovereignties, a military organization is essential to repel aggression and maintain the rights of the republic. In a nation of freemen, capable of self-government, a well organized militia is adequate for these purposes, in all ordinary contingencies. Every man feels the conscious dignity of being a part of the national sovereignty, and the proud duty of defending his own rights, and the rights of all.

Various opinions are entertained, as to the best organization of the Militia, and I cannot but hope that a discussion of them here will lead to a profitable result. Our Volunteers, whose time and talents have been largely given to the acquisition of military knowledge, present a formidable force, which may compare advantageously with that of any other State. Their conduct and discipline have secured the public confidence, and they marit much well devised legislation, as will secure their continued efficiency, and increasing numbers.

The invaluable benefits of our system of Common School instruction, are extending themselves throughout the whole Commonwealth, strengthening, elevating the mind, and preparing the generation which is to succeed us, for usefulness and just apprehensions of duty. In country districts, where the population is scattered, and a large portion of the children find active employment for near half the year, the system cannot reach all the ends that are accomplished in cities and towns. But the signal and extensive advantages resulting from it, throughout the State, as shown in the comprehensive report of the Superintendent of Common Schools, give assurance that Pennsylvania has laid the broad and deep foundation, for the perpetuity of her institutions, by securing a sound, intellectual and moral education, for all her children,

I have lately, with the Superintendent of the Public Schools, visited the city of Philadelphia. There is much for the good man to admire, in the variety, comprehensiveness and beautiful arrangement of her benevolent and charitable institutions, and to warm his gratitude towards the men who founded, and who now direct them. But, there is a moral grandeur presented to the patriot, in her public schools, that surpasses them all. By the former, which cannot be commended too strongly to the continued favor and fostering care of the Legislature, comfort and instruction are provided for a few, who are excepted from the mass by special misfortune. But the latter, are a blessing to all: they provide for improving and elevating the whole body of the people, and for qualifying every child in its onward way to maturity, by sound mental and moral instruction, for filling up its measure of usefulness, and accomplishing intelligently, the ends of its being. That community is happy, in which the system of general education is so widely diffused, and so well administered, as I have seen it in the county of Philadelphia.

Allow me, gentlemen, before closing this communication, to tender to you assurances of my hearty co-operation in your efforts to maintain the faith of the Commonwealth, and advance the welfare of our constituents. To secure these great objects, with the more certainty, it is desirable that the indispensable business of the Legislature should be acted on at an early period, and that no important subject of legislation should be deferred to the closing days of the session.

The practice, which has sometimes obtained, of affixing the Executive approval to bills during the recess seems to me to be opposed in the policy of the Constitution, while to act on them in the crowded hours that precede a final adjournment, requires a decision without affording time for consideration,—hence, a rule securing reasonable time for Executive deliberation, on bills presented to him near the close of the session, is most desirable.

Since the last session of the General Assembly, it has pleased Almighty God, to withdraw from the view of the American nation, its most eminent and best loved citizen. After a life devoted to his country, the defence of her soils, her institutions, and her honor,

RIVER NEWS.

☞ Last evening there were 3 feet 6 inches water in the channel and falling. The Alleghenny river is full of floating ice. The Monongahela had not commenced running out last evening.

☞ The new steamer Acadia, Capt. M. E. Lucas, leaves to-day for Cincinnati and Louisville—a fine chance for persons going that way.

☞ We received no Cincinnati papers by last night's mail.

☞ There were no arrivals of steam boats yesterday. The only departures were the Rhode Island and Harlem.

☞ For the information of our river friends, we publish the following list of arrivals and departures from the Louisville Courier of the 5th.

RIVER INTELLIGENCE.—At this city there is 4 feet 10 inches water in the channel and falling.

☞ The St. Louis Republican says: We have the following information from Col. Consaul, U. S. Mail Agent, recently despatched from this city to Cairo, and who returned a few days since, bringing with him all the mails which were detained along the river. By this we learn that the Independence is at Sliding Island; the Herald, Missouri Mail, and Olive Branch at Burnham Island; the Iatan, Congress and Patriot at Cape Giardeau; the Julia Chouteau hard aground opposite the Cape; the Iowa and Boreas No. 2 at Apple Creek; the John Ault, Swiftsure, and Hibernia above Towe Island.

☞ The St. Louis Republican of the 1st says:—The Weather continued, throughout yesterday, mild, the wind principally from the south. Yesterday evening it veered round to south-west, and shortly after dark commenced raining. At present there is every prospect of a break up of the ice in the river, and a rise in the waters. At the present writing, 10 o'clock, P. M., the rain is falling fast. The ice on the river is nearly covered with water.

☞ The Louisville Journal of the 23d says: On Thursday, it rained nearly all day. Yesterday it became colder, the thermometer being 40 degrees above zero.

There was some ice running in the river and it was rising a little last evening, with 5 feet 4 inches in the canal. Two boats left yesterday for Cincinnati.

☞ The steamer Lehigh has been sold at St. Louis, to run as a regular packet on the Illinois, C. J. Armstrong, Comander

Review of the Market.

REMARKS.—The past week has been one of the dullest ever known in our city. The river has continued closed, and there has been no means of getting produce to market. A better prospect is before us. The weather, which had been intensely cold, became moderate early in the week, and on Thursday rain fell during nearly the whole of the day. It yet remains cloudy and the weather is variable. The river rose one foot on the principal falls of Ohio, and yet continues to rise, and the ice must undoubtedly give way, at least sufficiently to admit of navigation hence to the mouth of the river. The Ben Franklin left for Cincinnati yesterday.

Owing to the condition of the river, there have been no transactions of importance in our market. The sales that have been made were merely to supply the local demand, and were of course very limited.

BACON.—Some lots of new Bacon have come in, it is worth from 5¼ @6c. for hog round.

FUEL.—There is very little Coal in the market, and it now sells at 30c.

MOLASSES.—The stock on hand is fair, and quote it at 30c by the barrel.

PORK.—Killing season is now over. We have not heard of any sales, during the past week, of pork in barrels. Holders ask $9.50 for prime, and $11,50 for mess pork. There have been about one hundred thousand hogs slaughtered at the pork houses in this city, which is an increase of forty thousand over any previous year. Messrs. White & Co. have slaughtered over 31,000; Huffman, Wells & Co., less than 30,000; Allen & Co. 25,000; and Fetter, Gray & Co., over 13,000; making, in the aggregate, something less than 100,000. We have observed in the papers some very extravagant estimates of the number of hogs killed in the west during the present season. One absurd estimate makes the number 1,500,000. Those who are most conversant with the subject estimate the whole number slaughtered for market at less than a million, which is an increase of about one hundred and fifty thousand over the number of last year. This season no hogs were driven South.

Baltimore Markets.

Office of the American, Jan. 7, 5 P. M.

FLOUR.—Within the last two days there has been some movement in the market for Howard st. flour. Yesterday morning dealers were asking $5,31¼ but this rate could not be obtained. It was afterwards offered at $5,25, and sales to the extent of 2500 bbls. have been made, including some parcels to-day at that price, which we quote as the current rate at the close. The receipt price from cars is $5,12½.

A sale of 150 bbls City Mills at $5,37½ is the only transaction reported.

GRAIN.—Wheat comes in only in small parcels which sell at 105 a 110 cents for good to prime reds.

Corn has declined. Sales of white to-day at 65 cts. Yellow is worth about 67 cts. but we hear of no sales.

We quote Oats at 42 cts.

PROVISIONS.—There has been some inquiry for Beef and Pork within the last few days, and some transactions have taken place. We quote new Mess Pork at $14,50a$15; Prime $12a$12,50; Mess Beef $10a$10,50; No. 1 $8,50a$8,75. and Prime $6,25a$6,50. We note sales to day of 50 bbls. Mess Pork at $15; 25 bbls. prime at $12,50. and 25 bbls. Prime Beef at $6,50. Also 300 bbls. Beef, comprising Prime, No. 1 and Mess, at $6,50, $8,50, and $10,50, respectively. The transactions in Bacon is small. We quote old Western Shoulders at 6¼ cts; Sides at 7¼ cts., and Hams 8a8¼ cts. Sales of new Baltimore cured at 7, 7¼ and 9 cts. for Shoulders, Sides and Hams. In Lard nothing of note has taken place. We quote No. 1 in kegs at 8¼a8¾ cts. and in bbls. at 7¾a8 cts. The stock is heavy.

WHISKEY.—The market is dull and the price has declined. Sales to-day of hhds at 24¼ cents, and of bbls. at 25a25¼ cents.

Clippings.

☞ The Rev. Dr. Blue, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was killed near Ontario, Indiana, on the 19th ult. by his horse taking fright.

☞ The daily consumption of Flour in the city of New York and its vicinity is estimated to be 2200 barrels

☞ Wm. Harper, convicted at New York of the murder of John G. Kemff, has been sentenced to be hanged on the 14th of next month.

☞ Two coin counterfeiters have been arrested in Philadelphia.

☞ David Johnson has been nominated for Governor of South Carolina, at the expiration of Gov Aiken's term.

☞ The Henderson Kentuckian, Dec. 27th says: A flat-boat with 1,600 bbls of flour ou board, was caught adrift, at the foot of Diamond Island, a few days since. We understand she was abandoned above Evansville, the crew becoming alarmed on account of the ice. If the boat was insured, the salvage for towing her up will amount to 33⅓ per cent.

☞ The word daisy is a thousand times pronounced, says Campbell, without adverting to the beauty of its etymology—"the eye of day."

Why are those who peruse a popular French author like good housewives after dinner? Because they sit down to Sue, (sew.)
